The News congratulates Sierra Madre on the spontaneous response of its loyal citizens who believe in progress and back up their civic pride with hard cash. Dear people, we knew you would do it. We were so sure of it that we caused to be published last week a call for bids for installing the lights and this week we assure you that the ornamental street lights for Sierra Madre will materialize and they will be a bright and shining advertisement that our town is in line with progress just as soon as the contract can be let and the construction accomplished.

For the benefit of those who may not have followed this campaign we will again state that it is proposed to erect seven ornamental street lights spaced about 80 feet apart beginning at the west corner of Sierra Madre garage on Central and extending around the Andrews & Hawks corner past Woodson F. Jones store on Baldwin, and five lights on Baldwin avenue, beginning at Olsen's shoe store, south past Welshe's corner and across the street to the southeast corner of Central and Baldwin. Owners and tenants of business property have financed 75 per cent of the expense and the public was asked in The News last week to supply the balance. The above figures show how nobly it responded.

The street lighting system will benefit every piece of property in Sierra Madre by attracting more home seekers of the better class to our city to say nothing of the feeling of pride and satisfaction every resident will experience when it will not be necessary to apologize and explain.

Now, people, just one more pull and we are over the top. A comparatively small balance remains to be subscribed. You'll be proud to give a trifle to help beautify and modernize our loved city, your neighbor will be proud to see your names along with theirs in the list and The News will be proud that you manifest the community spirit, without which no town can live and prosper.

Now, don't think, because the project is so nearly financed that there will be plenty of contributions without yours, for if everybody acted on that theory—don't you see?

There are numbers of people who have assured the writer of their financial support, who have neglected to report, and there are many others who have discussed the proposition with neighbors and said they intended to give. There are others who were undecided but had the matter under consideration and we ask all of you to come to our aid now, when your assistance is so vitally necessary. Don't be afraid of oversubscribing because if this is done it will be a simple matter to use the money in adding another light or two, if we get more money than the contract calls for.

Phone in your name and amount, send it by letter or call in person at The News office. This important improvement needs your help. You will not fail to do your part.

FORDED TO SAN DIEGO

Rev. W. J. Thompson and family drove to San Diego last week and spent several days enjoying ocean breezes. They returned Saturday.

PASADENA POSTS WASTED

Numerous complaints continue to come in regarding daily newspapers thrown on the streets to be blown about by the wind, and a gentle protest in these columns a couple of weeks ago seems to have been disregarded by the young business men who are supposed to deliver them to local patrons.

The chief of police hesitates to arrest mere children and The News dislikes to start a row with their parents but as a public nuisance the limit has long since been passed, and perhaps a better way to abate the evil will be to apply to the publishers of the papers, who may be presumed to have some control over their employees, or at least will protect their profits.

Tuesday morning the writer stopped at the corner of Central and Auburn and inspected an open pile of Pasadena Posts. A careful count showed just 40 papers waiting for our delightful summer breeze to come along and distribute them about the streets and yards of the long suffering neighborhood.

Talk about stuffing handbills in the culvert, this game has it beat forty ways and we wonder if the Post is sincere in its attempt to conserve white print paper and allow this not only needless and extravagant but harmful waste.

The helpless neighborhood will watch for results with interest.

COMPLIMENTS SIERRA MADRE

O. B. Sadler of San Pedro visited the family of his brother, J. F. Sadler, the first of the week. Mr. Sadler commented very favorably on the activity of Sierra Madre in public improvements now under way and contemplated, and complimented the wide awake spirit that is manifest on every hand.

POLITICAL ADVERTISING

The News, and all other newspapers, receive daily pages and pages of "copy", kindly and freely furnished by political candidates and their campaign managers for free publication, therefore it was a shock to find enclosed a check for $5 together with copy for a column ad (see last page) from a candidate who evidently appreciates the fact that grafting or begging newspaper space is as nifty as begging groceries, clothing, house rent or a back-door handout.

And the amazing fact is that some newspapers fall for it.

IOWA PICNIC AND REUNION

The Iowa association of Southern California will hold its annual picnic and reunion at Bixby park, Long Beach, Saturday, Aug. 14.

Prizes will be given to the oldest man and woman born in Iowa. All California political candidates who formerly lived in Iowa will be introduced but not allowed to make speeches and it is expected the attendance will reach 200,000.

Go early, stay all day. Take along a big grub basket and eating tools. Free coffee.

DAN CUPID'S HEADQUARTERS

Cards are out announcing the marriage of Miss Margarette Preston and Mr. Harold C. Pegler, to occur Aug. 21 at the Congregational church.

The engagement of Miss Avis Preston to Mr. C. L. Tarter of Fresno has also been announced, the marriage to take place in six or eight weeks.

Six years ago Miss Avis was appointed local manager of the Gas office here and after four years of faithful service was promoted to a position in the office of the district headquarters at Monrovia, and her sister, Miss Ellen, was appointed to fill the vacancy here, serving the company efficiently for a year, when she married Mr. Arthur T. Evans. The company then selected her sister, Miss Margarette, to manage their business and she has filled the position with the same grace, good nature and ability that seems to be a family characteristic.

Having exhausted the family supply of managers, the Southern California Gas company have selected Miss Mora Polsue to fill the position and as she also has a sister, future succession to the office will be watched with some curiosity and interest.

If you have anything to sell or trade, put a wanted in The News. These little ads always "bring home the bacon."

INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Wednesday forenoon as Harold Pegler was driving to his work as horticultural inspector at Palmdale, his machine collided head-on with another, partially wrecking both cars, which were left at the "Two Oaks" garage in Mint canyon.

A passing machine brought Mr. Pegler, who was the only one injured, to the home of his parents here. Fortunately no bones were broken, but he received a severe shaking up and his body was badly bruised by being thrown against the steering wheel.

It was at first thought he suffered internal injuries, but at this writing it is hoped that this is not the case.

Mr. Pegler had not been feeling well for a day or two and just before the accident, was overcome by an attack of vertigo, losing consciousness just before the machines struck.

SOLD FINE HOME

WILL BUILD ANOTHER

Carlton J. Pegler has sold his fine home, Grand avenue and Canyon, to Louis Karpf and will give possession Sept. 15. He will at once start construction of a new house on his sixteen acres lemon grove, on Live Oak avenue and promises it will be a credit to the town.

VAN DE WATER IN RACE FOR CONGRESS IN NINTH DIST.

Business men and ranchers throughout the Ninth Congressional district are responding very favorably to the candidacy of Charles F. Van de Water of Long Beach, who is out for the nomination for congress, according to L. L. Lottstetter of Pomona, who has been making a canvass of the situation.

It is claimed by those who are giving thought and attention to the question that a Republican business man of known ability and probity, an ardent supporter of the dry laws of the State and nation, and a believer in an honest tariff to protect the citrus raiser and other industries of the district, will find this a favorable year for his candidacy. Mr. Van de Water is a Long Beach banker, a trustee for the past fifteen years of the First Methodist church of that place, and a business man well known and respected in his community, his supporters claim.

Those who are working in behalf of Mr. Van de Water make the statement that a very determined campaign is to be waged throughout the district, which includes the cities and communities of Pasadena, Long Beach, Pomona, Whittier, Glendale, Monrovia, San Fernando Valley, San Gabriel Valley, Antelope Valley and other points.

Citrus packers, shippers and growers are especially interested in Mr. Van de Water's candidacy, it is said, on account of his firm stand for a better protection for the citrus fruits than has been obtained during the past few years.

PRIMARY ELECTION, AUG. 31.

Sierra Madre city is in the first super-divisional; the 69th assembly; the 35th senatorial and the 9th congressional districts.

The offices to be voted on will be United States senator, Representative in Congress, State Legislature, Senate and Assembly, Members of County Central Committee, Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, Presiding Justice of Court of Appeals, Judges of the Superior Court (10 vacancies), Judge of the Superior Court, short term and District Attorney, also Bond issue for Arcadia Balloon Field.

Polls will be open from 6 a. m. to 7 p. m. Voters who have not transferred their removals from one precinct to another before Aug. 1 cannot vote. A voter must have lived in the precinct from which registered 30 days prior to election day; must have been a resident of the county 90 days and of the state one year.

Election Boards

Precinct No. 1—Kindergarten school building; inspector, Mildred E. Taylor; judge, Minnie B. Davis, Jas. G. Williams; clerks, Mrs. W. E. Walker, Lillian M. Young, Harriet S. Wright.

Precinct No. 2—Steinberger's garage room; inspector, Edgar F. Ballou; judges, W. S. Andrews, T. P. Cook; clerks, Bessie Rhodes, Minnie E. Kimball, Elizabeth Steinberger.

Precinct No. 3—154 North Mountain Trail; inspector, J. H. Wright; judges, Genevieve B. Neutzel, Ada M. Oswald; clerks, Julia E. Shannon, Annie M. Greene, Wm. R. Lees.

Four from each board will also serve as election officers on Arcadia Balloon school bond election. The full boards serve for the primaries.

There will be no extra charge on your telephone bill for the items you may wish to send in to the News office.

A QUOTATION FROM A REMARKABLE EDITORIAL BY HENRY WATTERSON :

"Democracy is but a side issue. The paramount issue, underlying the issue of Democracy, is the religion of Christ and Him Crucified—the bedrock of civilization, the source and resource of all that is worth having. If the world is to be saved from destruction, it will be saved alone by the Christian religion."

WASHING CAR IN EFFICIENT WAY

Unusual Care Must Be Exercised During First Months of Use of New Auto.

VARNISH EASILY SCRATCHED

Only Pure Castile Soap or Nonaalkali Soaps Should Be Used in Removing Grease—Wax Polishes Are Quite Efficacious.

No automobile owner should forget that unusual care must be taken in washing a new car during the first few months of use.

The best of varnish requires considerable time to harden, and until that time the finish is easily scratched. Only pure castile soap or non-alkali soaps should be used for the removal of grease. Gasoline is out of the question.

Lukewarm (not warm) water should be used in washing, and accumulations of mud or dust should be carried off by means of a one-inch stream of water from the hose instead of being rubbed off with a sponge.

After a thorough rinsing, the varnish should be dried by means of a chamois-skin wrung out continually in clear water. A long sweeping movement of the chamois produces better results than a rotary motion.

A soft woolen duster is preferable to a feather duster for the interior of the car.

Plate-glass windows are best cleaned with soapy water to which a small amount of alcohol has been added. Rinsing may be done in the usual way, the chamois being used to take up the moisture remaining on the car body, first making sure the chamois is free from grit.

The body of an automobile must be carefully washed and cleaned; otherwise it will lose its beautiful finish.

Wax polishes have been on the market for a number of years and their application is a simple matter. A piece of clean cheese cloth is used in applying the wax and another to distribute it evenly.—H. L. Prindle, in Popular Science Monthly.

AVOID OVERHEATING ENGINE

Ingenious Automatic Safeguard Recently Devised by Car Owner—How It Works.

A car owner recently devised an ingenious automatic safeguard against overheating. The ground for the ignition current was made by soldering a copper wire to the top of the rear cylinder. Just as soon as heat enough develops in the cylinder the solder melts and the engine automatically stops.

WATCH CLOSELY FOR NAILS

Run Hand Around Shoe After Removing Tire to Ascertain Cause—Prevent Second Mishap.

After removing the tire because of a puncture, run the hand around the shoe to ascertain if it was caused by a nail. If this is not done and a nail was the cause, a puncture may be caused immediately in the replacement tire.

WHY WALK TO WORK WHEN A TEASPOONFUL OF GAS WILL TAKE YOU THERE AND BACK

That old necessity of walking to work, with the alternative of depending on the pleasure of railway workers has been eliminated by the latest in auto construction, called the "Beauty."

The "Beauty" is the invention of Sydney Isaacson of New York city, it weighing 475 pounds. It has a 20-horse power engine, capable of going at the rate of 50 miles per hour, and will go 40 miles on a gallon of gasoline. In other words a teaspoonful of gas will take you to your work and back.

SOME RUBBER DON'TS

Don't run your car with the wheels out of alignment. Wheels that "don't track" are glutons for rubber.

Don't let your inflation get below the point recommended by the tire dealer. Underinflation is keeping thousands of tire-builders working overtime.

Don't overinflate. If you like the sensation of solid tires, buy a wagon.

Don't ignore small cuts. A patch in time saves dollars.

Don't buy tires smaller than recommended by the manufacturer for a car of the weight of the one you own. It isn't economy.

Don't forget to remove and reverse your inner tubes every three months. They appreciate a change and will pay for it.

Don't buy a nameless tube or casing. The manufacturer who is afraid to put his name on his product is ashamed of the goods.

TO CLEAN ENGINE CYLINDERS

Important to Have Piston in Uppermost Position of Its Sweep to Protect Surface.

It has long been customary to clean gasoline engine cylinders with long-handled scraping tools, the cutting edges of which are hardened. In scraping a cylinder in this manner, it is important to have the piston in the uppermost position of its sweep, since otherwise the scraping tool is likely to slip into the bore of the cylinder and injure the smooth surface of the cylinder wall.—American Motorist.

AVOID ANY UNDERINFLATION

Chief Reason Why Many Tires Do Not Give Maximum Mileage—Regulate Proper Pressure.

Underinflation is the chief reason why many tires fail to give maximum mileage. To determine quickly what air pressure to carry on tires: For three-inch tires divide the weight of load by 32; for four-inch tires, by 48, and for five-inch, by 64. Tire mileage will be increased greatly if the motorist regulates air pressure properly.

AUTOMOBILE NEWS

Don't start a race with a friend on a public highway.

Ball bearings must not be adjusted so that they are too tight or cramped.

Ordinary garden hose makes an admirable protector for ignition cables.

In case of a blowout, examine the tube you are going to use very carefully.

The pleasure of driving is greatly enhanced if the cooling system of the car is in good condition.

It would seem that every car owner ought by this time to be warned against running on too rich a mixture.

Best results can be secured from a motor cooling system by keeping the radiator cells free from foreign matter.

In cars where the headlamps are fastened to the fenders, looseness in these latter results in excessive vibration, which will account for rapid ruin of bulbs.

If in a hurry to stop a spring from squeaking, pour a little kerosene over it, guiding the oil down the sides with the finger so it will run in between the leaves.

Few owners pay the attention to the ball bearings that these latter deserve. They usually wait until the garage man calls attention to the injury done by breakage.

INDIAN RUINS of OAXACA

Sculpture at Monte Alban, Oaxaca.

IN HUNDREDS of places throughout the state of Oaxaca, Mexico, are to be found what they call "Pueblos Viejos" (old villages), some close to the site of the new villages and others in the wild country, far away from all habitations. In these ruins traces can be seen of houses, temples, fortresses and tombs. In some places graves only are seen to mark the place of a former civilization, and these consist of mounds, some of which are built to a considerable height, writes a correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor.

Among the ruins well known on account of their state of preservation and importance can be mentioned the ruins of Mitla, those at Monte Alban, at Guiliugula and at Achiutla.

The famous ruins of Mitla are the best preserved on account of the dry climate of the country in which they are situated. They are among the most elaborately ornamented ruins in Mexico, and on the walls are found about fifteen different designs made with mosaics known as grecques. The figures are all geometrical and are found mostly in panels on both inside and outside of the walls of the rooms.

Features of Mitla Ruins.

The original name of these ruins was Lyobaa, and they were later on called by the Mexicans "Mictlan" which means "the place of the dead." The place is now in the center of the Zapotec country, and the Zapotec language is spoken by the inhabitants of the village close to the ruins. One of the chambers contains six huge monoliths, each being about 12 feet high and 7 feet in circumference, which have no carvings. The most beautiful room is known as the Hall of Mosals. Its four sides are covered with designs. Paintings were found on some of the walls, but these have mostly disappeared. Close to the ruins a pyramidal mound is to be seen and about two miles distant is a fort of great interest.

The grecques or arabesques found at Mitla give it a distinctive character, and in no other part of the republic are there any ruins like them. When the Spaniards conquered Mexico, Mitla was still an important place.

The ruins of Monte Alban are situated on the outskirts of the city of Oaxaca and seem to belong to a much older civilization than those of Mitla. In fact, Monte Alban was in ruins when Mitla was at its height of prosperity. The ruins cover an area of about two miles in length by a third of a mile in width. On every side are remains of temples, foundations, terraces, walls, and graves, but these places have not been explored and are covered with debris. Some fine stones with carvings are still standing and many have been removed to the National Museum of Mexico City. The sculptures indicate that the Maya civilization must have extended to this part of the country.

Fort at Guiliugula.

The ruins of Guiliugula on the Isthmus of Tehuantepec show the existence of a big fort which was used in the battles between the Mexicans and the Zapotecs. This fort was built on the top of a mountain, and contains two pyramids of stones, having stairways leading up to the tops. Remains of temples, chambers, trenches, and terraces can also be distinguished.

The ruins at Achiutla consist of courts, walls, mounds, and terraces. Achiutla was the sacred city of the great Mixtec nation, their country being called Mixtecapam before the Spaniards arrived in Mexico. An extraordinary number of pieces of pottery is found everywhere in this village, which is still inhabited by the Mixtec Indians, or Mixtecos.

In the graves that have been opened in these different ruins have been found a great variety of stone and clay idols, ornaments made of gold, copper, jade, shell, obsidian, and stone. Beautiful specimens of painted pottery have also been found, and some of the finest samples of Mexican ceramic art come from the tombs of Oaxaca.

The Indian tribes inhabiting the state of Oaxaca are the Zapotecs, Mixtecos, Mijes, Cuicatecs, Mazatecs, Mexicanos, Amusgos, Triques, Chatinos, Chinantecs, Huaves, Zoques, and Chontales. Of these the Zapotecs and Mixtecos were the most important and they resisted the Spaniards long after the rest of the country had been conquered. The Huaves, Amusgos and Triques have nearly all disappeared.

Each Tribe Has Its Dress.

The Indians still use, in their native villages, a peculiar dress in each tribe, the most picturesque being that worn by the Tehuantepec (Zapotec) women. The Mazatec and Chinantec dresses are made with elaborate designs in red.

The Indians weave their own cloth and use vegetable dyes and cochineal for coloring. In the mountain villages they still observe many of their ancient customs and they are very superstitious. The Mije Indians belong to one of the wildest tribes found in Mexico and few people enter their rugged country.

When the Spaniards came to Mexico the Zapotecs had their own government; Zaachila was their capital and Cosiojeza their king. They had been at war with the Mexicans for many years, and with the aid of the Mixtecos had been able to resist the invasion of the Mexicans.

The conquest of these tribes was mostly due to the influence of the Spanish monks, who went to the most remote parts of the country and lived with the Indians many years, learned their language and preached the Gospel to them.

On market days and feast days in the city of Oaxaca many types of Indians can still be seen, with their own peculiar dresses, and many of them speak nothing but the language of their own tribes. In few parts of the republic can so many different types be seen together.

PETS THAT SAVED PROPERTY

Instances of Robbers Captured Through the Efforts of Small Dog, Monkey, and Parrot.

A Parisian was recently attacked in a lonely street by an apache who was armed with a revolver. The villain fired once and missed, but ere he could fire again the citizen's terrier had him by the ear. The apache, shrieking with pain, dropped the gun, and the Parisian managed to secure him, according to London Answers.

Recently, in the same city, a burglar entered the flat of a wealthy man, who had a pet monkey named Ernest. The burglar made up a valuable parcel while the monkey hid in a corner.

Suddenly the monkey began to pelt the burglar with cups, plates, saucers, ash-trays and inkstand, in fact, with everything portable in its reach. The man made a dash for the beast with a heavy cane, but the monkey was much too quick for him and mounted to a high shelf.

Climbing on a chair, the man was going to strike the monkey, when it flew at his face and man and monkey crashed to the floor. This roused the rest of the flat dwellers, who quickly secured the disturber of their peace, and now Ernest is the pet of the mansions.

Quite recently a mansion in Surrey was raided and the burglars were having quite a walk-over, as they thought. But presently the parrot woke up and began to make a few choice observations in such a loud and familiar tone that the robbers thought discretion the better part of valor and were decamping when caught.

Wemyss of Wemyss Castle.

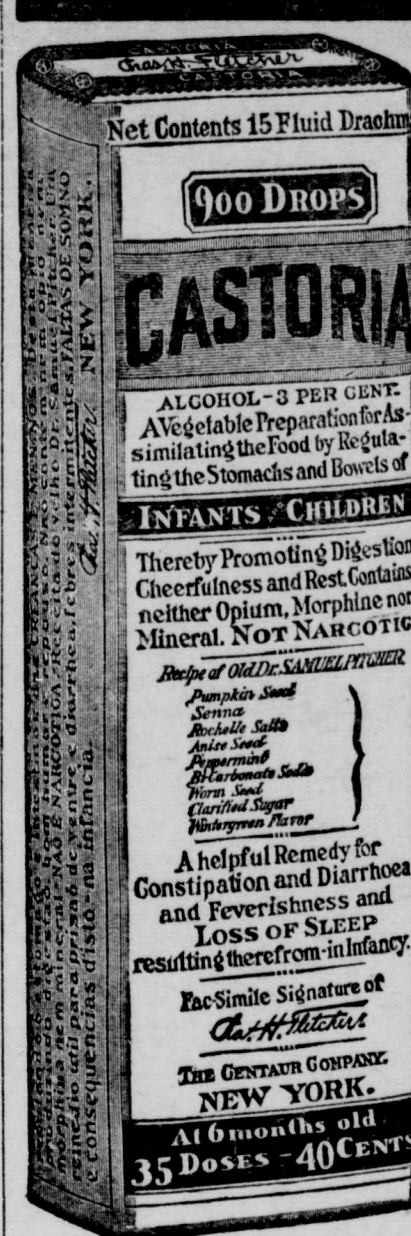

Wemyss castle, mentioned in a will case in the Scottish courts, includes in its modern structure parts of a thirteenth century building. Near by it is the ruin of Macduff's castle, a fifteenth-century erection. In spite of tradition, the latter has nothing to do with the Macduff of immortal memory, nor can the family of Wemyss claim kin with that great name. But the family does trace back on the same spot through seven generations, a pedigree vouched for by Sir William Fraser as one of the longest and purest in Scotland. A Wemyss of Wemyss castle entertained Edward I. before Robert the Bruce won his victories; another, later, Mary, Queen of Scots, who to her ruin met Darnley under his roof.

Why, of Course.

Catarrh is a Real Enemy and Requires Vigorous Treatment

Do Not Neglect It.

When you use sprays, atomizers and douches for your Catarrh, you may succeed in unstoppering the choked-up air passages for the time being, but this annoying condition returns, and you have to do the same thing over and over again.

Catarrh has never yet been cured by these local applications. Have you ever experienced any real benefit from such treatment?

HIS DESTINATION NO OBJECT

As Example of Perfect Freedom From Care, Colored Boy Would Be Hard to Beat.

Sitting in the rear end of a day coach on a jerkwater road in Texas, my end of the car being a smoker for white passengers and the front end being reserved for the accommodation of colored persons, I—looking through the open door of the dividing partition—saw the conductor stop in the aisle alongside a half-grown negro boy who had boarded the coach at a flag station.

"I ain't got no ticket, cap'n," I heard the darky say. So saying, he hauled a handful of silver dollars out of a pocket and extended the hand, its palm covered with coins.

"Well, then, where do you want to go?" asked the conductor.

"Cap'n, it don't make no difference," quoth the boy. "Jes' you tells me, please, sah, when dis yere money is done ridden up an' den I'll git off ef I lak de looks of de place, an' ef I don't lak it I'll give you some mo' money an' keep on a-ridin'."—Irvin S. Cobb in the Saturday Evening Post.

Too Good to Work.

A tall ancestral clock stood upon the mantelpiece in a Southern home, faithful to its duty. It had run uninterruptedly for years. On a holiday occasion the maid, an old-time negro, decorating the house with holly and mistletoe, furnished the clock with a particularly brilliant wreath, and as she said, dressed it up for the occasion. The next morning when she came to work, the faithful old clock had stopped.

She stood before it, arms akimbo, and apostrophized it: "I knowed you was going to stop, clock! You is just like a nigger—no sooner 'n you gets all dressed up, you think you is too good to work."

Black, green, brown and white amber, as well as the yellow variety, is sometimes found.

Throw these makeshift remedies to the winds, and get on the right treatment. Get a bottle of S. S. S., and begin a treatment that has been praised by sufferers for half a century.

S. S. S. gets right at the source of Catarrh, and forces from the blood the germs which cause the disease. Special medical advice regarding your own case free. Address: Medical Director, 106 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga.

GOT HIS SEATS, ALL RIGHT

Under the Circumstances, Many Will Think Bell-Ringer Was Moderate in His Demands.

One of the annoyances of the manager of a show is the "free list" in small towns, and it is his duty to look over the list when he arrives and do the necessary cutting. Edward Arnold of "The Storm" company, tells of a manager of his company in the Middle West, who found two seats allotted to the "bell-ringer," asked the house manager why, and was introduced to the man. "Why two seats?" he said.

"There's a curfew in this town," he said. "I am the bell-ringer. If I get the seats the bell gets a couple of light taps. If I don't it rings an hour."

"Where is the bell?"

"Next door." He got the seats.—New York Post.

A Helping Hand.

A very shy young farmer was courting a serious-minded young woman who was not averse to him or to marriage, but she found herself after a long period of silent courtship no nearer the goal than ever; the young man could not summon up courage to speak.

One night, as they sat together in dead silence, of course—in her father's parlor, she decided that the hour and the man had come.

"George," she said in her most serious tones, "George, if you love me and don't like to say so, you may squeeze my hand."

A CHAPTER ON SANDWICHES.

As this is the glorious time of year for outings, camping, boat trips and picnics, the sandwich will be the most common article of food. The following may be suggestive, although one may make sandwich filling or soup out of almost anything that is palatable:

If watercress is obtainable, there is nothing more snappy and refreshing for a sandwich filling. Season with lemon juice, olive oil, salt and pepper, with a pinch of sugar, or simply salt and sugar.

Pepper Filling.—Chop green peppers that have been seeded and the white pulp removed and simmer for ten minutes in a tablespoonful of butter. Season with salt and set aside to cool. Spread on buttered bread.

Dutch cheese, made smooth with cream and seasoned with chopped chives, or green pepper, nuts or both. Grated horseradish with cream spread on buttered bread.

Tongue, cooked, spread with mustard, cut in thin slices.

Swiss cheese cut in very thin slices. Rich American cheese grated and mixed with cream, spread on rounds of bread and fried on both sides in a little butter.

Watercress with hard-cooked eggs, chopped and mixed, or hard-cooked eggs chopped, seasoned with melted butter, a pinch of mustard, salt and a dash of cayenne. Eggs mixed with grated cheese, chopped onion or chopped cucumber.

Thin slices of banana dressed with oil and lemon juice.

Corned beef spread with mustard cut in thin slices.

Chopped dates and nuts, flavored with a pinch of cinnamon and cloves.

Drained and boned anchovies, pounded to a paste with butter. Or anchovy paste may be purchased. Chopped egg mixed with anchovy is good; also cream cheese.

Thinly sliced radishes, sliced cucumbers seasoned with mayonnaise, placed on slices of buttered bread just before serving, so that they will be crisp.

"In all places, then and in all seasons,
Flowers expand their light and soul-like wings,
Teaching us, by most persuasive reasons,
How akin they are to human things."

SEASONABLE FOOD.

When asparagus becomes too tough to serve as a fresh vegetable, use it in soups for it is one of the most healthful of vegetables. Cook the tips, put them through a sieve and add to this pulp the liquor in which the asparagus was cooked. Prepare the soup as for the usual cream soup.

Scalloped Cauliflower.—Cook the cauliflower until tender, then drain and place a layer in a buttered baking dish; on top of the cauliflower place a layer of grated cheese mixed with a white sauce. When the dish is filled with alternate layers of the vegetable and cheese add a layer of bread crumbs which have been buttered. Brown in a moderate oven for fifteen minutes.

Walnut and Salmon Salad.—Take three-fourths cupful of salmon, one-half cupful of walnut meats, three-fourths of a cupful of shredded cabbage. Separate the salmon into flakes, cut the walnut meats into small pieces; crisp the cabbage in cold water. Drain and mix the ingredients, add one cupful of salad dressing and serve on lettuce.

Orange Velvet Cream.—Boil without stirring, one cupful of sugar and one-half cupful of water until it threads, pour this over two stiffly beaten egg whites; beat until cool. Add one cupful of orange juice, the juice of a lemon and a pint of double cream whipped until firm. Freeze slowly and serve in sherbet glasses sprinkled with minced, candied orange peel.

Baked Almond Pudding.—Break six macaroons and six ladyfingers into small pieces, pour over a cupful of hot milk and then let stand covered for half an hour. Beat to a paste a third of a cupful of sugar, the yolks of three beaten eggs, a teaspoonful of vanilla and a half cupful of blanched, shredded almonds. Fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs and bake in individual ramekins, serve with a fruit sauce.

One may fall, but he falls by himself—
Falls by himself with himself to blame;
One may attain and to him is the pelt,
Loot of the city in gold or fame;
Plunder of earth shall be his own
Who travels fastest and travels alone.
—R. Kipling.

SUMMER LUNCHEONS.

During the summer months, the lighter more delicate meats are more acceptable, such as sweetbreads, chicken, veal and lamb; while eggs, mushrooms and all kinds of fresh vegetables will be used abundantly.

Chicken Salad.—Mix cold cooked chicken with twice the quantity of diced celery, add a half cupful of shredded almonds and enough mayonnaise to moisten. Serve on lettuce garnished with slices of hard cooked eggs.

Sweetbreads Salad.—Parboil in acidulated water a pair of sweetbreads, drain and dip into ice water to chill. Remove all membrane and pipes and cut in fine pieces; add an equal quantity of celery cut in dice and serve with a rich, highly seasoned boiled or mayonnaise dressing.

Curried Chicken.—Prepare creamed chicken using one cupful of white sauce to one cupful of finely minced or diced chicken; add a shredded green pepper, one-half cupful of canned tomatoes and heat thoroughly. Season with salt, pepper, and add a teaspoonful of curry powder.

Chicken Croquettes.—Use the remnants of cold boiled or roast chicken, or combine with roast pork or veal finely minced; add boiled rice or mashed potato. Bind with well beaten egg or with a thick cream sauce; season, shape into croquettes, dip in to beaten egg and crumbs and fry in deep fat. The canned, boned chicken is very good to make croquettes.

Deviled Chicken.—Make a sauce of salt, pepper, dry mustard, paprika, grated lemon peel, lemon juice, Worcestershire and a few drops of tabasco sauce. Add a lump of butter when the sauce begins to boil. When very hot, add cubes of cold chicken and cook until heated through. Cold cooked veal or roast pork may be used in the same way.

Chicken Sauté.—Cut up a chicken and pound the pieces with a potato masher until they are flat. Season, dredge with flour, fry in butter or bacon fat until brown.

To cultivate the sense of the beautiful is one of the most effective ways of cultivating an appreciation of the divine goodness.—Bovee.

PICNIC DISHES.

At this time of year when the lure of the woods and stream calls us to pack our lunch baskets and hie us out into the open, a satisfying lunch is one of the necessities.

Stuffed Eggs.—Hard-cooked eggs cut in halves lengthwise, the yolks removed, are mixed with creamed butter, pepper and salt, a bit of mustard and cayenne, then the whites are filled roundly with the mixture. They may be filled and put together in halves, wrapped in waxed paper twisted at the ends.

A salad is always a welcome dish for a picnic. Potato salad seems to be the one most often served. Take cold, boiled potatoes, cut in cubes, add one small onion, a cucumber, both cut fine, salt and pepper to season and a handful of blanched almonds shredded. Add a little French dressing to the potato to marinate it. Let it stand for an hour or two, then add a rich, well-seasoned boiled dressing or a mayonnaise. Chives may be used instead of onions if preferred.

Gingers.—Cream one-half cupful of butter, one-half cupful of sugar, add one well-beaten egg, one tablespoonful of milk, one cupful of flour, a pinch of salt, a teaspoonful of baking powder and one-half teaspoonful of vanilla. Beat well and drop by teaspoonfuls upon a buttered sheet. Decorate with blanched almonds cut in strips.

A small cake which is always liked for outings is this: Prepare any sponge cake mixture and bake in gem pans. When cold split open and remove some of the crumbs. Fill with crushed strawberries and sweetened whipped cream. The better way is to carry the filling and finish the cakes just before serving. It takes but a few moments.

Bathing Suits Ape All Modes

Review of Various Styles of the Season.

BLACK ENJOYS FIRST PLACE

Color's Absence Last Summer From Front Line Ranks Was Only Temporary; Marked Vogue for Brown.

The bathing costumes appearing on the beaches this year, writes a seashore fashion correspondent, depict a fashion review of all the styles that we have had in dresses this season. The evening dress, the afternoon frock, the sports suit, all find their prototype in the bathing suit of today. Just like the young girl's evening dresses are the taffeta suits, with their billowing skirts composed of tier after tier of ruffles, picot edged or bound with silk, and their huge ribbon sashes with streaming ends.

It is the simple, youthful type of evening dress, elaborate for the beach. It is true, but plain in contrast to the extreme things of last season, in which no effort was spared to make them all that was costly and perishable. Velvets were dyed, then crushed and printed into gorgeous designs. Cashmeres were treated to give them the appearance of costly antique stuffs. Handwork of all sorts was featured in great quantities.

Last year the seaside resorts were very gay for the first time in several years, and bathing suits were almost lurid. Each woman, in her desire to express joy at the end of the dreary war years, selected the gayest things she could find—and there were plenty of gay bathing suits to be found. Bright reds, brilliant purples and vivid greens bobbed over the surface of the waters and basked in the sunshine on the sands. Everybody apparently seized the opportunity to reveal in the most brilliant clothes ever seen on the beaches, and the seashore was one spot where bright apparel did not appear out of place.

Reaction Toward Simpler Things.

This year, however, sees a change in bathing suits. The pinnacle of extravagance in fashion appears to have been reached, for the time being, at least, and there is a tendency to turn toward simpler things. The beach clothes faithfully mirror the demand for something simpler in our dress. Many of them are exact copies of simple little French frocks.

A turning to the darker colors is noted. Black, which was almost crowded out of the list of bathing things last year, now enjoys first place. Its absence from the front line ranks was only temporary. This may be due in a measure to the fact that people found bright colors unsatisfactory when dipped in the salt water every day or exposed to the bright sun, and are quite ready to come back to the practical black satin and taffeta suit.

The vogue for brown is quite as marked in bathing suits as in other clothes. We never have thought of brown as an attractive color for bathing suits; in fact, it was unusual to see it on the beach. Probably because the color has been so much in the limelight, designers have worked out some of their prettiest models in it. Certainly there is much to be said in its favor in comparison with the gold colored and bright blue satins covered with batik work of last year.

We may have quite as much latitude in the lines of our bathing suits as in those of our frocks. We still have the straight chemise model, which is always good. New this year and following the low waistline dresses is the bathing suit with long waist portion and full skirt.

Petaled Skirt Appears on Beach.

The petaled skirt, too, appears in bathing dresses. More elaborate ones show rows of scalloped ruffles from the waistline to the hem of the skirt, while those of simpler construction merely have the bottom of the skirt cut in petal form. The loop drapery also has found its way into these clothes, and, of course, the sash is one of the most prominent features.

Among the more elaborate suits not intended for actual swimming—just who wears them nobody seems to know, but the fact remains that they are to be found in the shops—are black velvet bodices attached to skirts of taffeta having plaited ruffles finished at the edge with old-fashioned pinking. Satin suits with long basques attached to accordion plaited skirts belong to this type. A beach costume of brown satin made after this manner is trimmed with little flowers of wool and satin.

There is a bathing suit strongly resembling a dress brought out by Worth earlier in the season. The similarity lies in the skirt, which has panels formed by loops of wide ribbon. Black taffeta is chosen for it. The under-dress consists of Turkish bloomers attached to a waist, while the skirt is simply loop panels of taffeta fastened to a sash.

A bit of color is introduced by facing the panels to a depth of about two inches with bright green silk. It is a frivolous sort of a skirt, but has the spice of novelty as well as being very pretty. The little cap accompanying it is made by stitching two squares of silk together. There are tabs at either side which tie in a bow on the top, thus shaping the cap.

Turkish Trousers Much Exaggerated.

Bloomers are receiving quite as much of the designer's attention this year as the suits themselves. Variations of the Turkish trousers, much exaggerated in many cases appear beneath short bathing dresses. Indications are that the skirt may be abandoned altogether. The suit described is an instance of the bloomers being allowed to show. The skirt is merely a series of loose hanging loops of silk. In other suits the skirt consists only of a back and front panel.

Towelings and rubberized ginghams are modest and suitable as well as fashionable for trimmings. The imported Turkish towel that looks like a soft cotton plush is used in beautiful colorings. The rubberized ginghams are in small checks and plaids. An interesting use of white towelings appears on a brown taffeta dress of chemise style, with kimono sleeves. The towelings are folded in points to form rows down the entire length of the suit, both back and front. Full Turkish bloomers are trimmed at the sides in the same way. A round white cap like a chef's headdress completes the costume.

The woman who loves to swim just for the pure joy of exercise will not fail to include in her summer wardrobe one or two of the one-piece jersey swimming suits. These have grown in popularity each year. They have become almost a standard fashion in bathing suits, so that there is little change in them except in the ways of combining colors. Contradictory to the suits of silk and satin which, as already noted, are in the darker shades this year, are the jersey suits, which are rather vivid in color and decorated with gay stripes of a contrasting hue.

Bathing Hats An Important Feature

All the bathing hats are exceedingly interesting. For several years we have had nothing but variations of the rubber hat and the bandanna from which to choose. Now there is a decided change and hats are featured as part of the bathing costume. The Egyptian headdress is accountable for many of these new hats. A black taffeta suit embroidered with white worsted has a little round cap of the taffeta, which is Egyptian in every detail, even to the plaited tabs hanging over either ear.

Every sort of headgear appears to have been copied into bathing caps. The academic hat of the college professor will bob on the surface of the ocean beside copies of the sultan of Turkey's turban, the headgear of the cook, the cap associated with the highlands of Scotland, made of rubberized plaid silk, and caps of blue rubber dotted all over with yellow centered white daisies.

Some of the prettiest ones are of toweling, both domestic and imported. Ratine is also used extensively. The loveliest bit of color ever seen on any beach appears in a coral colored fleecelined ratine cape. A white toweling cape is made with a deep yoke topped by a wide crushed collar of navy blue silk. A very frivolous touch is given by the addition of a little boutonniere of bright red flowers made of duvetyne.

Hats Show Upward Tilt to Brim.

A hat to be in vogue this season requires the lines to swing away from the face. The general tendency is toward three-cornered hats or tams. Smaller turned-back turbans are also shown and the larger hats show trims that roll backward all the way around. Hats are shown in various brilliant shades, such as jade, henna, the new tones of red, and vivid orange.

Stop the "Run."

If a "run" is discovered in a silk stocking at a time impossible to catch it with a needle and thread, a little soap slightly wet applied to the lower part will keep it from spreading until such a time as it is possible to mend.

BOY SCOUTS

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.)

RECORD OF SCOUT GROWTH

The steady growth of the Boy Scouts of America, not only numerically but in the importance of its activities, is indicated by the official figures recently compiled for the past year. They show:

December 31, 1919, total official enrollment, 462,781. (Previous year, 420,066). Number of boys enrolled as scouts, 369,790. Number of men enrolled, 101,991. (Scoutmasters, assistant scoutmasters, and members of troop committees or local scout councils).

Number of boy scout troops, 16,176. Number of cities and counties maintaining expert scout executives for direction of local scout work, 270. One year's gain in number of cities and counties so equipped for scouting, 46 per cent.

Number of scoutmasters who have had college education, 7,789, or more than one-half of the total. Merit badges issued to scouts, 41,432 (increase of 11,270).

Life scout badges issued, 1,146. Star scout badges issued, 881. Eagle scout badges (highest rank), 468.

Scouts earning gold medals (given to parents of those who lose their lives in efforts to aid others), 3.

Scouts receiving silver medals for life saving, 48.

Scouts receiving letters of commendation for heroism, 7.

SERVICE MEN LEAD SCOUTS.

Indiana, Pa., is to be congratulated on its three new scoutmasters and its commissioner.

Scoutmaster Clark Keener was decorated with the French Croix de Guerre, and was twice cited for the D. S. C. for conspicuous bravery in action.

Scoutmaster Beers remounted his company under heavy machine gun fire and was cited for the D. S. C. for extreme bravery in action.

Scoutmaster Crawford, when he learned that he could not be sent to France as lieutenant with a machine gun company, volunteered for immediate service as chaplain and was in some of the heaviest fighting.

Commissioner E. M. Gearhart was a Y. M. C. A. physical director with the naval air service, and later volunteered as a chaplain.

GENERAL PRAISES BOY SCOUTS.

Following a mobilization of the boy scouts of Clarksburg, Va., in his honor Maj. Gen. C. P. Summerall sent the following letter to Scout Executive S. C. Adams:

"I wish to convey to the boy scouts of Clarksburg how much I appreciate the opportunity afforded me to review them.

"I am a member of the council of the Louisville boy scouts, and take a very deep interest in all of their activities. My son is also a boy scout, and I regard the training he will receive as being very essential if he is to take his proper place in the affairs of the business world. A boy is very unfortunate in this day if he is denied this opportunity."

SCOUT FIRST AID SAVES LIFE.

Theodore E. Curtis of Troop 22, Salt Lake City, probably saved the life of Henry C. Krantz in Cottonwood Canyon, when all the fingers on his left hand and the thumb on his right were blown off by the explosion of a giant dynamite cap which he had found lying near where miners had been blasting. Krantz was taken into a nearby scout camp. W. D. Wood, scoutmaster, reports: "Both hands were bleeding profusely. Young Curtis applied first aid and bandaged the two torn hands so skillfully that the hospital physician sent a note congratulating the boy on the thoroughness of his timely treatment, which perhaps saved Krantz's life."

USED SCOUT WATER TELESCOPE.

Miss Emily McCarthy, a nurse of Meriden, Conn., disappeared, and her hat was found in Black pond, indicating that she had drowned, probably by wading into the water in the dark and becoming confused. Every effort to find the body by dragging failed, so Scout Executive John D. Roberts made a water telescope from a keg, with a glass bottom. Holding this over the side of a boat and peering into the depths of the pond, the body of the missing nurse was finally seen and brought to shore.

GOOD TURNS OF THE SCOUTS.

The boy scouts of Canton, N. Y., have helped the water department in enforcing its rules regarding water supply.

Aided in rescuing goods and fighting three fires in town is the good turn report of the scouts in New London, N. H.

Westfield, Mass., scouts policed one-quarter of town on its 250th anniversary, and also assisted police at a community dance.

TOMMY'S COAT

By JACK LAWTON

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

Marilyn sat in the lilac arbor and sang as she sewed her seam. Marilyn was like an embodiment of spring herself, with sky blue eyes and apple blossom cheeks and the sweet smiling sunniness of her. Nearby stood a quaint little figure like a pixie stepped from a book or a hobgoblin come to life. Though the figure was, after all, merely that of a small red-haired Irish boy clad in an old coat far too big with coat tails which touched his heels.

"And so your name is Tommy Ryan," the girl was saying, "and your mother washes for the people in the big house next door. But why did you come to see me Tommy?"

"It's the coat," the boy replied shamefacedly, "the boys at school do be laughing at me because mother makes me wear it. I want to try some day to earn another. So I thought if you might be after havin' errands to do —"

"You see," Marilyn said gently, "there are not many errands, Tommy, when I have only to shop for myself and old Tilly who helps for her board. But —" she paused thoughtfully.

"Why," asked the boy, "did you be after comin' out here to live by yourself in this bit of a house? Haven't you got any folks, or a husband maybe?"

The girl laughed, then answered seriously.

"I'm quite alone in the world Tommy Ryan," she said, "and when I drove through this country and saw the 'bit of a house' one day it occurred to me that I might be able to live more cheaply and perhaps more profitably here than in the great city. I could send my illustrations from here to the unkind publishers just as well. So —"

"So here ye are," finished Tommy. "Well, it's a nice doll's house of a place, an' me mother says that once it was the 'lodge' of the great house next door an' the folks that lived here then was great folks. It's their son has come back to keep the house now when he isn't in New York or Boston or Europe; he has auto cars and horses and everything. An'," added Tommy hotly, "he give this old coat o' mine to mother. Things he casts off an' she makes me wear 'em."

"It's a shame," Marilyn declared, gaining thereby Tommy's loyal friendship.

"But you won't always have to wear old coats," she comforted, "you'll go out and earn new ones for yourself."

Marilyn considered.

"I have wanted a garden for some time," she said, "a flower and a vegetable garden —"

Marilyn did some figuring upon her fingers.

"Seeds are high," she added regretfully, "but we will manage some way Tommy and you are engaged at a very low figure to be my gardener. Still that's a beginning. And maybe some day if you work well we will raise crops and you shall drive into town to sell them."

Tommy's face glowed beneath the freckles.

"You mean it?" he asked. "Honest?"

"Honest," agreed Marilyn. And just then over the high dividing wall appeared the head of a man whose body evidently was poised upon a garden ladder.

"Beg pardon," said the man pleasantly, "but as I happened to be training a vine up my side of the wall I could not help overhearing some of your conversation. And if you are thinking of buying garden seed —" he bowed in Marilyn's direction, "why my head gardener has quantities which we will be glad to give you. We make no use of them. And why purchase," he went on hastily as Marilyn's lips were forming a polite refusal, "when seeds are going to waste?"

The girl smiled.

"Why that is so," she replied, "and thank you."

"The poor little devil," he said laughing, "to think that Nora makes him wear my old coats. He must have had a time at school."

The garden surrounding the "bit of a house" flourished and showed great promise under Tommy's tireless care, while the young illustrator laid her sketching aside and came out to healthfully help him.

The son of the great house joined in the enthusiasm and postponed for the second time his New York trip as he, too, labored at Marilyn's direction. It was when the golden days of a golden August were drawing to a close that the girl came stepping lightly across the grasses to Tommy Ryan's side. She held a new coat in her hands, not the khaki kind which Tommy had lately been wearing, but a grand coat of soft light tweed. "Tommy dear," she said, "this is for you to wear tomorrow, a brand new suit. For there's to be a wedding in the garden, and the wedding, Tommy, is to be mine."

Tommy nodded, shrewdly pointing a finger to the other side of the wall.

"And his," he said.

"And his," Marilyn agreed, her face radiant.

"Afterward, if you will, you shall come to us at the great house, Tommy, and coax the flowers to grow for me there."

"Oh! I'll come," the Irish boy answered happily, "but I'm thinking the flowers will need no coaxin' when ye are, Miss, they'll bloom where ye tread."

ONE SIDE, PLEASE

With kind's friends, one eventide,
I was entranced by a joyful ride,
Between shady forests of walnut trees,
Softly fanned by a cooling breeze;
Score of pleasure seemed complete
When a kindred spirit I chanced to meet.

I joined in his laugh o'er a timely jump
That saved us both a hazardous bump.

In a swift moving car, nearing close of day,
I am sure politeness may often pay.
And gladly abide by the Golden-Rule,
To give right of way to a festive mule.

—A. L. Soran.

STREET LIGHT SPECIFICATIONSWork to Be Done

To furnish and install ornamental cement lighting posts, conduit, cables and material and labor necessary to render the posts ready for use and to complete the work as hereinafter specified and as shown on plans for said work.

To do whatever else is required by these specifications.

The contractor shall begin work within ten days after awarding of contract and shall complete same within thirty days.

Concrete Foundation and Setting of Posts

The Posts are to rest upon a concrete foundation twenty (20) inches square at the top, twenty-seven (27) inches square at the bottom, with a thickness of twenty-seven (27) inches. The concrete for the foundation shall be composed of one (1) part, by measure, of cement, two and one-half (2½) parts of sand, five (5) parts of broken stone or gravel, that will pass through a one and one-half (1½) inch ring.

The foundation must be given at least seventy-two (72) hours before the post is placed thereon.

Conduit

Conduit and conduit bends shall be sheridized conduit and shall be sheridized both inside and outside and shall be three-quarter (¾) inch or larger. In laying out this conduit the sidewalk and paving is not to be disturbed unless absolutely necessary.

The conduit shall be placed as near curb as possible.

The conduit shall consist of three-quarter (¾) inch sheridized conduit in which are to be pulled number 8 D B rubber covered suitable for 600 volts. This conduit shall start from top of first Edison Pole east of Baldwin avenue on Central avenue, and continue north on Baldwin to No. 34, crossing street to Craig building and go west on Central avenue to Windsor lane.

All conduit threads are to be treated with Crane pipe paste as made by the Crane Company before screwing together, absolutely water tight. Each section between each post is to be tested by means of an air pump to see that there is no leak or split pipe, and subject to pressure of not less than fifteen (15) pounds, to be maintained for not less than three (3) minutes. Conduit must be dry before wires are pulled in.

The end of each length of pipe shall be reamed on the inside and shall be coupled so that the ends of adjoining lengths of pipe shall abut each other. The radius of all bends shall not be less than six (6) inches for three-quarter (¾) inch conduit or twelve (12) inches for one (1) inch conduit. The wiring of posts shall be arranged as shown on plan.

The contractor shall furnish aforesaid, wire posts, conduit, sockets, posts, balls and material to complete the job in accordance with plans and specifications.

All cables and wires shall be pulled through the conduit in such a manner as not to injure braiding or insulation. All wire shall be installed in first class manner and shall be free from grounds and shall have 600 volt insulation between wire and ground.

Reconstruction of Sidewalks

The reconstruction of sidewalks which are broken by the installation of posts and conduit shall be done by the contractor in conformity of original sidewalks or curb in accordance with the following additional requirements, namely—the curb and sidewalk.

PICTURE SHOW NEEDED FOR SIERRA MADRE

For almost two years The News has tried to induce a good picture show to come to Sierra Madre and on three occasions almost succeeded, each deal falling through because of the lack of a proper building in the business district.

Only last week the writer visited a movie man in Monrovia and for a time it seemed he might be induced to open a motion picture house here.

A community must provide amusement for its people or they will seek it elsewhere and this "elsewhere" thing in all lines of commerce is poison to any town.

That a city of nearly if not quite 2,500 people should be without a picture show is astonishing and it seems to us that a good house here showing the latest and best films, could not fail to be a profitable venture.

BIRTHDAY SURPRISE PARTY

Mrs. Frank Cox gave a surprise party at their home, 205 N. Hermosa, last Monday evening in honor of the birthday of her husband.

The guests were carefully instructed to arrive (casually) at stated intervals and as neighbors "dropped in" the "victim" was completely deceived until there was no more porch room and someone demanded his age.

A very pleasant evening was spent in games and music, followed by light refreshments supplemented with a huge birthday cake.

The guests were Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Schneberger, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Whiting, Mrs. E. D. Moore, Mrs. G. L. Yarrington.

A "CRAZY" EDITOR

Last night a prominent citizen was asked to contribute to the street light fund and refused to even give one dollar, stating he was not in harmony with the movement and volunteered the information that we were "crazy" to put such a financial burden on the people. He also objected to the maintenance of a comfort station because it might cost the city something to take care of it even if the Pacific Electric railway donated the building free of cost to the city, and while he was objecting he included the city park idea, saying that most (or many) of the city parks in small places were unkempt and a public disgrace.

The News has publicly, and its editor privately, advocated these improvements and if the desire to see our city progressive and beautiful is conclusive evidence of a rabid case of insanity we plead guilty.

Are there any other "crazy" people in Sierra Madre besides the editor, the 33 people whose names appear as subscribers to the light fund on the front page, and every business man and institution in the city, who will line up with the rest of us "crazy" bugs and signify their willingness to do so by subscribing to the light fund?

Only $165.00 more is necessary and we expect it to be all subscribed before the next issue of this paper. Will the people of Sierra Madre vindicate the position of The News and complete the financing of this public improvement or will they remain "sane" and by their silence signify their approval of a back number, cross-roads village.

"Crazy" subscriptions to the ornamental street light fund will continue to be received at The News office or the First National bank. Phone, write, call or send in your contributions.

CHILDREN'S PARTY

Little Miss Dorothea Yarrington gave a party Monday evening at her home, 335 N. Auburn, to a few of her young friends.

A hilarious evening was enjoyed with games, music and refreshments.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mrs. W. E. Walker gave a party last Friday evening in honor of her daughter, Miss Gladys, celebrating her nineteenth birthday.

Games, music and dancing were indulged in and light refreshments were served. Everybody had a splendid time and wished Miss Gladys many happy returns. Thirty guests attended.

JAZZ PARTY

Miss Yerda Appleby gave a jazz party, following a sumptuous beef-steak dinner, at her home, 241 E. Grandview, last Friday evening.

Winners of games were awarded noise making whistles, which were blown lustily to the accompaniment of jazz music.

The entire party adjourned to the dance at the Woman's Club house, where, it is reported, the best dance of the season was enjoyed. Sixteen young pupils attended the dual session.

Brunswick Principles In Fine Tire Making

The reason you are interested in the name on your tire is that it identifies the maker. By knowing the maker you can judge his ideals of manufacture.

The only secret of a super-tire lies in the principles of the maker. His standards decide the quality. For there are no secrets in the tire industry.

What you get depends on what is behind the name on your tire. Brunswick, as you know, means a very old concern, jealous of its good name. Since 1845 the House of Brunswick has been famous the world over for the quality of its products.

The Brunswick Tire is all that you expect—and more. Your first one will be a revelation. You'll agree that you've never known a better. And you'll tell your friends. So spreads the news among motorists. The Brunswick is the most welcome tire that ever came to market.

Try one Brunswick Tire. Learn how good a tire can be built. And remember, it costs no more than like-type tires.

CHAPTER X.

A careful analysis of Shirley's feelings toward Bryce Cardigan immediately following the incident in Pennington's woods, had showed her that under more propitious circumstances she might have fallen in love with that tempestuous young man in sheer recognition of the many lovable and manly qualities she had discerned in him. As an offset to the credit side of Bryce's account with her, however, there appeared certain debits in the consideration of which Shirley always just her temper and was immediately quite certain she loathed the unfortunate man.

He had been an honored and (for Shirley knew to the contrary) a welcome guest in the Pennington home the night, and the following day had been his host, committed great injuries upon the latter's ears for little or no reason save the satisfaction of an abominable temper, and threats of further violence, declared his unflinching enmity to her nearest and best-loved relative, and in the next breath had had the insolence to praise of his respect and admiration for her.

However, all of these grave crimes and misdemeanors were really insignificant compared with his crowning offense. What had infuriated Shirley was the fact that she had been at some pains to inform Bryce Cardigan that she loathed him—whereat he had looked her over coolly, grinned a little, and declined to believe her! Then, seemingly as if fate had decreed that her fury should be impressed upon her still further, Bryce Cardigan had been granted an opportunity to save, in a strikingly calm, heroic and painful manner, her and her uncle from certain and horrible death, thus placing upon Shirley an obligation that was as irritating to acknowledge as it was futile to attempt to reciprocate.

That was where the shoe pinched. Before that day was over she had been forced to do one of two things—acknowledge in no uncertain terms her indebtedness to him, or remain silent and to be convicted of having been, in plain language, a rotter. So she had telephoned him and purposely left ajar the door to their former friendly relations.

Monstrous! He had seen the open door and deliberately slammed it in her face. Luckily for them both she had heard, all unsuspected by him as he slowly hung the receiver on the hook, the soliloquy wherein he gave her a pointed hint of the distress with which he abdicated—which knowledge was all that deterred her from despising him with the fervor of a woman scorned.

The fascination which a lighted candle holds for a moth is too well known to require further elucidation here. In yielding one day to a desire to visit the Valley of the Giants, Shirley told herself that she was going there to gather wild blackberries. She had been thinking of a certain blackberry pie, which thought naturally induced reflection on Bryce Cardigan and reminded Shirley of her first visit to the Giants under the escort of a boy in knickerbockers.

Her meeting with Moira McTavish that day, and the subsequent friendship formed with the woods-boss' daughter, renewed all her apprehensions. On the assumption that Shirley and Bryce were practically strangers to each other (an assumption which Shirley, for obvious reasons, did not attempt to dissipate), Moira did not hesitate to mention Bryce very frequently. To her he was the one human being in the world utterly worth while, and it is natural for women to discuss, frequently and at great length, the subject nearest their hearts. Moira described Bryce in minute detail and related to her eager auditor little unconscious daily acts of kindness, thoughtfulness or humor performed by Bryce—his devotion to his father, his idealistic attitude toward the Cardigan employees, his ability, his industry. And presently, little by little, Shirley's resentment against him faded, and in her heart was born a great wishfulness bred of the hope that some day she would meet Bryce Cardigan on the street and that he would pause, lift his hat, smile at her his compelling smile and forthwith proceed to bully her into being friendly and forgiving—browbeat her into admitting her change of heart and glorying in it.

To this remarkable state of mind had Shirley Sumner attained at the time John Cardigan, lending his last trump in a vain hope that it might enable him to take the odd trick of a huge game he had played for years, decided to sell his Valley of the Giants.

John Cardigan, desperate and brought to bay at last, had telephoned Pennington at the latter's home, accepting Pennington's last offer for the Valley of the Giants. The cruel triumph in the Colonel's handsome face as he curtly rebuffed old Cardigan had been too apparent for the girl to mistake; she realized now that a crisis had come in the affairs of the Cardigans, and across her vision there flashed again the vision of Bryce Cardigan's homecoming—a tall old man with his trembling arms clasped around his boy, with grizzled cheek laid against his son's, as one who, seeking comfort through bitter years, at length had found it.

Presently another thought came to Shirley. "I wonder!" she mused. "He's proud. Perhaps the realization that he will soon be penniless and shorn of his high estate has made him chary of acquiring new friends in his old circle. Perhaps if he were secure in his business affairs—Ah, yes! Poor boy! He was desperate for fifty thousand dollars!" Her heart swelled. "Oh, Bryce, Bryce," she murmured. "I think I'm beginning to understand some of your fury that day in the woods. It's all a great mystery, but I'm sure you didn't intend to be so—so terrible. Oh, my dear, if we had only continued to be the good friends we started out to be, perhaps you'd let me help you now. For what good is money if one cannot help one's dear friends in distress? Still, I know you wouldn't let me help you, for men of your stamp cannot borrow from a woman, no matter how desperate their need. And yet—you only need a paltry fifty thousand dollars!"

Shirley carried to bed with her that night the woes of the Cardigans, and in the morning she telephoned Moira McTavish and invited the latter to lunch with her at home that noon. When Moira came, Shirley saw that she had been weeping.

"My poor Moira!" she said, putting her arms around her visitor. "What has happened to distress you? There, there, dear! Tell me all about it."

Moira laid her head on Shirley's shoulder and sobbed for several minutes. Then, "It's Mr. Bryce," she wailed. "He's so unhappy. Something's happened; they're going to sell Cardigan's redwoods; and they—don't want to. Just before I left the office, Mr. Bryce came in—and stood a moment looking at me—so tragically I—I asked him what had happened. Then he patted my cheek—oh, I know I'm just one of his responsibilities—and said, 'Poor Moira! Never any luck!' and went into his private office. I waited a little, and then I went in, too; and—oh, Miss Sumner, he had his head down on his desk, and when I touched his head, he reached up and took my hand and held it—and laid his cheek against it a little—while—and oh, his cheek was wet. It's cruel of God—to make him—unhappy. He's good—too good. And—oh, I love him so, Miss Shirley, I love him so—and he'll never, never know. I'm just one of his—responsibilities, you know; and I shouldn't presume. But nobody—has ever been kind to me but Mr. Bryce—and you. And I can't help loving people who are kind—and gentle to nobodies."

Moira Described Bryce in Minute Detail.

Moira's story—her confession of love, so tragic because so hopeless—stirred Shirley deeply. She seated herself in front of Moira and cupped her chin in her palm. "Of course, dear," she said, "you couldn't possibly see anybody you loved suffer so and not feel dreadfully about it. And when a man like Bryce Cardigan is struck down, he's apt to present rather a tragic and helpless figure. He wanted sympathy, Moira—woman's sympathy, and it was dear of you to give it to him."

"I'd gladly die for him," Moira answered simply. "Oh, Miss Shirley, you don't know him the way we who work for him do. If you did, you'd love him, too. You couldn't help it, Miss Shirley."

"Tell me about his trouble, Moira."

"I think it's money. He's been terribly worried for a long time, and I'm afraid things aren't going right with the business. It hurts them terribly to have to sell the Valley of the Giants, but they have to; Colonel Pennington is the only one who would consider buying it; they don't want him to have it—and still they have to sell to him. Mr. Bryce says his father has lost his courage at last; and oh, dear, things are in such a mess. Mr. Bryce started to tell me all about it—and then he stopped suddenly and wouldn't say another word."

Shirley smiled. She thought she understood the reason for that. However, she did not pause to speculate on it, since the crying need of the present was the distribution of a ray of sunshine to broken-hearted Moira. "Silly," she chided, "how needlessly you are grieving! You say my uncle has declined to buy the Valley of the Giants?"

Moira nodded. "My uncle doesn't know what he's talking about, Moira. I'll see that he does buy it. What price are the Cardigans asking for it now?"

"Well, Colonel Pennington has offered them a hundred thousand dollars for it time and again, but last night he withdrew that offer. Then they named a price of fifty thousand, and he said he didn't want it at all."

"He needs it, and it's worth every cent of a hundred thousand to him, Moira. Don't worry, dear. He'll buy it, because I'll make him, and he'll buy it immediately; only you must promise me not to mention a single word of what I'm telling you to Bryce Cardigan, or in fact, to anybody. Do you promise?"

Moira seized Shirley's hand and kissed it impulsively. "Very well, then," Shirley continued. "That matter is adjusted, and now we'll all be happy. Cheer up, dear, and remember that some time this afternoon you're going to see Mr. Bryce smile again, and perhaps there won't be so much of a cloud over his smile this time."

When Moira returned to the office of the Cardigan Redwood Lumber company, Shirley rang for her maid. "Bring me my motorcoat and hat, Thelma," she ordered, "and telephone for the limousine." She seated herself before the mirror at her dressing-table and dusted her adorable nose with a powder-puff. "Mr. Smugly Cardigan," she murmured happily, "you walked roughshod over my pride, didn't you? Placed me under an obligation I could never hope to meet—and then ignored me—didn't you? Very well, old boy. We all have our innings sooner or later, you know, and I'm going to make a substantial payment on that huge obligation as sure as my name is Shirley Sumner. Then, some day when the sun is shining for you again, you'll come to me and be very, very humble. You're entirely too independent, Mr. Cardigan, but, oh, my dear, I do hope you will not need so much money. I'll be put to my wit's end to get it to you without letting you know, because if your affairs go to smash, you'll be perfectly intolerable."

She paused suddenly. "No, I'll not do that, either," she soliloquized. "I'll keep it myself—for an investment. I'll show Uncle Seth I'm a business woman, after all. He has had his fair chance at the Valley of the Giants, after waiting years for it, and now he has deliberately sacrificed that chance to be mean and vindictive. I'll buy the valley but keep my identity secret from everybody; then, when Uncle Seth finds a stranger in possession, he'll have a fit, and perhaps, before he recovers, he'll sell me all his Squaw Creek timber—only he'll never know I'm the buyer. Shirley, my dear, I'm pleased with you. Really, I never knew until now why men could be so devoted to business. Won't it be jolly to step in between Uncle Seth and Bryce Cardigan, hold up my hand like a policeman, and say: 'Stop it, boys. No fighting, if you please. And if anybody wants to know who's boss around here, start something.'"

When her uncle came home that night, Shirley observed that he was preoccupied and disinclined to conversation.

"I noticed in this evening's paper," she remarked presently, "that Mr. Cardigan has sold his Valley of the Giants. So you bought it, after all?"

"No such luck!" he almost barked. "I'm an idiot. I should be placed in charge of a keeper. Now, for heaven's sake, Shirley, don't discuss that timber with me, for if you do, I'll go plain, lunatic crazy."

"Poor Uncle Seth," she purred sweetly. Her apparent sympathy soothed his ruffled soul. He continued: "Oh, I'll get the infernal property, and it will be worth what I have to pay for it, only it certainly does grieve me to realize that I am about to be held up, with no help in sight. I'll see Judge Moore tomorrow and offer him a quick profit for his client. That's the game, you know."

"I do hope the new owner exhibits some common sense, uncle dear," she replied, and turned back to the piano. "But I greatly fear," she added to herself, "that the new owner is going to prove a most obstinate creature and frightfully hard to discover."

True to his promise, the Colonel called on Judge Moore bright and early the following morning. "Act Three of that little business drama entitled 'The Valley of the Giants,' my dear judge," he announced pleasantly. "I play the lead in this act. You remember me, I hope. I played a bit in Act Two."

"In so far as my information goes, sir, you've been cut out of the cast in Act Three. I don't seem to find any lines for you to speak."

"One line, judge; one little line. What profit does your client want on that quarter-section?"

"That quarter-section is not in the market, Colonel. When it is, I'll send for you, since you're the only logical prospect should my client decide to sell. And remembering how you butted in on politics in this county last fall and provided a slush fund to beat me and place a crook on the Superior court bench, in order to give you an edge in the many suits you are always filing or having filed against you, I rise to remark that you have about ten split seconds in which to disappear from my office. If you linger longer, I'll start throwing paper-weights." And as if to emphasize his remark, the judge's hand closed over one of the articles in question.

The Colonel withdrew with what dignity he could muster.

Upon his return from the office that night, Bryce Cardigan found his father had left his bed and was seated before the library fire.

"Feeling a whole lot better today, eh, pal?" his son queried.

John Cardigan smiled. "Yes, son," he replied plaintively. "I guess I'll manage to live, till next spring."

"Oh, I knew there was nothing wrong with you, John Cardigan, that a healthy cheek wouldn't cure. Well, we can afford to draw our breath now, and that gives us a fighting chance, partner. And right after dinner you and I will sit down and start brewing a pot of powerful bad medicine for the Colonel."

Accordingly, dinner disposed of, father and son sat down together to prepare the plan of campaign. For the space of several minutes a silence settled between them, the while they puffed meditatively upon their cigars. Then the old man spoke.

"We'll have to fight him in the dark."

"Why?"

"Because if Pennington knows, or even suspects the identity of the man who is going to parallel his logging railroad, he will throw all the weight of his truly capable mind, his wealth and his ruthlessness against you—and you will be smashed. You have one advantage starting out. The Colonel doesn't think you have the courage to parallel his road in the first place; in the second place, he knows you haven't the money; and in the third place he is morally certain you cannot borrow it, because you haven't any collateral to secure your note. So, all things considered the Colonel will be slow to suspect us of having an ace in the hole; but by jinks we have it, and we're going to play it. You must engage some reliable engineer to look over the proposed route of the road and give us an estimate of the cost of construction."

"For the sake of argument we will consider that done, and that the estimate comes within the scope of the sum Gregory is willing to advance us."

"Now, then, you are going to incorporate a company to build a road twelve miles long—and a private road, at that. That would be a fatal step. Pennington would know somebody was going to build a logging road, and regardless of who the builders were, he would have to fight them in self-protection. How are you going to cover your trail, my son?"

Bryce pondered. "I will, to begin, have a dummy board of directors. Also, my road cannot be private; since we must be a common carrier, we might as well carry our deception still further and incorporate for the purpose of building a road from Sequoia to Grant's Pass, Ore., there to connect with the Southern Pacific."

John Cardigan smiled. "The old dream revived, eh? Well, the old jokes always bring a hearty laugh. People will laugh at your company, because folks up this way realize that the construction cost of such a road is prohibitive."

"Well, since we're not going to build more than twelve miles of our road during the next year, and probably not more than ten miles additional during the present century, we won't worry over it. It doesn't cost a cent more to procure a franchise to build a road from here to the moon. If we fail to build to Grant's Pass, our franchise to build the uncompleted portion of the road merely lapses and we hold only that portion which we have constructed. That's all we want to hold. Moreover, deeds to rights of way can be drawn with a time-limit, after which they revert to the original owners."

"Good strategy, my son! And certainly as a common carrier we will be welcomed by the farmers and cattlemen along our short line."

"Well, that about completes the rough outline of our plan. We have a year in which to build our road; if we do not hurry, the mill will have to shut down for lack of logs, when our contract with Pennington expires."

"You forget the manager for our new corporation—the vice president and general manager. He must be a man of real ability and a person you can trust implicitly."

"I have the very man. His name is Buck Ogilvy and only this very day I received a letter from him begging me for a small loan. I have Buck on ice in a fifth-class San Francisco hotel."

"Tell me about him, Bryce."

"I'll read you his letter. I claim there is more character in a letter than in a face."

Here Bryce read aloud:

"Golden Gate Hotel—Rooms Fifty Cents—and Up.

"San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 16, 1916.

"My dear Cardigan: Hark to the voice of one crying in the wilderness; then picture to yourself the unlovely spectacle of a strong man crying."

"Let us assume that you have duly considered. Now wind up your wrist and send me a rectangular piece of white, blue, green or pink paper bearing in the lower right-hand corner, in your clear, bold cigraphy, the magic words 'Bryce Cardigan'—with the little up-and-down hook and flourish which identifies your signature given in your serious moods and lends value to otherwise worthless paper."

"When you knew me last, I was a prosperous young contractor. Alas! I put all my eggs in one basket and produced an omelette. Took a contract to build a railroad in Honduras. Honduras got to fighting with Nicaragua; the government I had done business with went out of business; and the Nicaraguan army recruited all my laborers and mounted them on my mules and horses, swiped all my grub, and told me to go home. I went. Why stay? Moreover, I had an incentive consisting of about an inch of bayonet—fortunately not applied in a vital spot—which accelerated rather than decreased my speed."

"Hurry, my dear Cardigan. I finished eating my omelette the day before yesterday."

"Make it a hundred, and God will bless you. When I get it, I'll come to Sequoia and kiss you. I'll pay you back some time—of course."

"Wistfully thine,

"BUCK OGILVY.

"P. S.—Delays are dangerous, and procrastination is the thief of time.—B."

John Cardigan chuckled. "I'd take Buck Ogilvy, Bryce. He'll do. Is he honest?"

"I don't know. He was, the last time I saw him."

"Then wire him a hundred. Don't wait for the mail."

"I have already wired him the hundred. In all probability he is now out whirling like a dervish."

"Good boy! Well, I think we've planned sufficient for the present, Bryce. You'd better leave for San Francisco tomorrow and close your deal with Gregory. Hire a good lawyer to draw up the agreement between you; be sure you're right, and then go ahead—full speed. When you return to Sequoia, I'll have a few more points to give you. I'll mull them over in the meantime."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Selfishness Gains Nothing.

Men should see life as more than a means of personal advancement. Selfishness may achieve, but its inglorious name will soon be forgotten in the round of yesterdays. It's life that lives for the common good that lays tribute on humanity and carves an indelible name in the very foundations of history. Call it Utopian if you will. Facts show that men must die to really live. And men who give themselves to human betterment live as they raise others from unreasonable drudgery to honorable toil and common comforts.

Birds That Speak.

Ravens, crows and magpies are all better speakers than parrots. They are not so versatile and the sounds they utter are less varied, but their voices and articulation are far more human. A crow's talk in the next room may easily be mistaken for that of a person. Parrots are the best imitators; that is to say, they mimic whistling and other noises, particularly laughing to admiration. It has been remarked that their voices in speaking are like that of a crazy person.

Reasons for Using Stone.

The forest rangers on Mount Rainier have a house on top of the mountains built of stone, whereas under usual conditions it is the custom to construct these buildings of wood. The proximity of the stone and the scarcity of wood and the difficulty of obtaining it from the lower levels is responsible for this departure.

NEEDED A THOROUGH SOUSING

Evil Spirit of Hackman Could Not Be Exorcised Except by Most Stringent Methods.

Doctor Brown, a negro evangelist, was a firm believer in the ancient custom of river baptism, and converts whom he baptized in this manner seldom forgot it. A few years ago he held a christening in a New Jersey town on the banks of the Delaware river, where a dozen or more converts were assembled, awaiting their turns to be immersed. Among them was a hackman, who evinced a lively interest in the ceremony.

"Why does the good doctor," he asked of a fellow convert, "duck some of them folks two times an' others more?"

"He ducks 'em once," explained his friend, "for every new name they're goin' to have."

"Is that possible?" the hackman replied. "I was goin' to call myself Thomas Jefferson Lincoln Anderson, but I guess 'Tom' will be 'bout long 'nuff."

This conversation was overheard by the sharp ears of Doctor Brown, who finally beckoned the hackman to come forward.

"Yo' name, please?" he inquired in a deep bass voice.

"Jesse baptize me 'Tom,' that's 'nuff," the candidate replied, as the evangelist, taking him none too gently by the neck, pitched him far out into the stream, where he ducked him not once but half a dozen times with such rapidity and vigor that a few minutes later the hackman found himself on the shore, coughing, spluttering and fighting for breath. The ceremony was soon over, and when he had recovered his strength he made his way to the side of Doctor Brown.

"What fo' you duck me that way?" he demanded in aggrieved tones. "I come here to be baptized, not to be drowned."

"My good man," replied Doctor Brown, "you was so filled with the devil I had to use a powerful lot of water to wash him out of yo' system."

One Good Time.

I think my most embarrassing moment took place one lovely night last summer. I was engaged to be married and decided to have one good time with an old friend of mine. I canceled my intended husband's date, complaining of a sick headache, and went out joy riding. I explained the circumstances to my friend, so we decided to go to a bathing beach some distance away to take a plunge in the lake. We were having a grand and glorious time swimming and diving when lo! who should stand on the pier but my future husband. You can imagine my agony when my friend called to me, "Say, May, dive with me once more; then we'll have lunch."—Exchange.

When Man Weighs Nothing.

Prof. Edward V. Huntington of Harvard university showed by an elaborate mass of figures printed in Science that a man on a train moving along the equator westward at 18,700 miles an hour, or eastward at 16,700 miles an hour would weigh nothing, as measured by an observer on the train.

Taking Chinese Census.

The inhabitants of China are counted every year in a curious manner. The eldest master of every 100 houses has to count the families and make a list, which is sent to the imperial tax-house.

Avoid Collisions.

Don't collide with anything. The man at the helm must know how to steer away from obstructions and avoid shoals if he would successfully make the ports and havens down the streamway of life.—Humphrey J. Desmond.

Actions That Count.

Let us, if we must have great actions, make our own so. All action is of infinite elasticity, and the least admits of being inflated with celestial air until it eclipses the sun and the moon.—Emerson.

Was Discouraged

Lest 65 Pounds in Weight and Had to Give Up Work. Has Been Well Since Using Doan's

"Being exposed to extreme heat when working as an engineer, and then going outdoors to cool off, caused my kidney trouble," says Karl Goering, 833 N. Orkney St., Philadelphia, Pa. "In cold weather and when it was damp, my joints and muscles would swell and ache, and often my limbs were so badly affected it was only with great misery I was able to get around. For a week I was laid up in bed, hardly able to move hand or foot."

"Another trouble was from irregular and scanty passages of the kidney secretions. I became dull and weak and had to give up my work. Headaches and dizzy spells nearly blinded me and I went from 265 to 200 in weight. Nothing helped me and I felt I was doomed to suffer."

"At last I had the good fortune to hear of Doan's Kidney Pills and began taking them. I soon got back my strength and weight and all the rheumatic pains and other kidney troubles left. I have remained cured."

"I hear tell that your boy, Runt, got whipped good and proper by the schoolmaster tuther day," said a neighbor. "How did he behave about it afterwards?"

"Aw, he didn't behave a-tall, to speak of," replied Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge. "I ketched him trying to sneak out with my gun to take a shot at the professor. But I yanked it away from him and bent it over his head a couple of times and kept him from behaving to amount to anything."—Kansas City Star.

SWAMP-ROOT FOR KIDNEY AILMENTS

There is only one medicine that really stands out pre-eminent as a medicine for curable ailments of the kidneys, liver and bladder.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root stands the highest for the reason that it has proven to be just the remedy needed in thousands upon thousands of distressing cases. Swamp-Root makes friends quickly because its mild and immediate effect is soon realized in most cases. It is a gentle, healing vegetable compound.

Start treatment at once. Sold at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

German Process Faulty.

Indigo dye was always made from the juice of the indigo plant until the Germans invented a way of making it synthetically. English manufacturers of serge have recently been testing the natural and the artificial dyes, with the result that the natural gives a depth of color from 5 to 20 per cent superior to the artificial. H. E. Armstrong, an authority on dyes, says the German process does not make indigo, but only one of the constituents of indigo, called indigotin.

PEACE WORK of the RED CROSS

CURING UNDER-NOURISHMENT

WORLD comes from Washington that the cities and towns and rural districts of the nation are waking up, looking themselves over, examining the dark places, and deciding, almost all of them, that a vast amount of improvement is possible in both health and looks. And this awakening and stirring about is laid at the door of the American Red Cross. In other words, the Red Cross has offered through its many channels to lend the cause a trained mind, a big heart and a strong generous hand. Reports just made by the national headquarters of the organization show that there are today 1,000 Red Cross chapters engaged in one or more forms of social and community activity included in the peace-time program of the society.

Evidence of the increasing alertness of communities to their needs is found on all sides. They are recognizing protection and conservation of life, recreation, child welfare, community organization, sanitation, education, delinquency, Americanization and innumerable other problems as their very own, their most vital business. In the solution of these, they are being given the aid of the Red Cross "without stint or limit" wherever it will do the most good.

War-time developments gave every community in the United States an organized and recognized center of activity through which the people can serve and improve themselves. Such centers are the Red Cross chapters, scattered throughout the length and breadth of the nation. They are important and controlling factors in the peace plans of the American Red Cross. Each chapter being a local activity, all chapters are aware of existing conditions in their communities and are acquainted with what steps are necessary to improve the general welfare. Upon them rests the duty of offering some specialized service which may be adapted to home-town needs, toward the solution of the perplexing problems which daily confront the home folks. No community and no family is without them.

These peace duties are outgrowths and continuations of the duties which came during the war. They, of course, receive the best attention of the Red Cross. But they in no way interfere with furnishing relief in disasters, carrying on foreign relief and finishing up the war job.

A community may have a very feeble sort of awakening. Does the Red Cross ignore the sign of life? Not at all. The Red Cross regards even a faint interest as too valuable to be neglected and attempts to offer the form of service suited to that community's need. In one locality where 13 of the 22 chapters engaged in peace-time work have jurisdiction over the population of less than 10,000, it is interesting to note how the consciousness of the smaller chapters is growing.

One of them recently requested the privilege of showing its city how garbage can be handled in an economical and cleanly manner. In response to the request, a Red Cross worker visited the chapter, armed with public health pamphlets and with working plans for incinerators and other methods of disposal. A chapter in California which is active in the field of health and social welfare writes:

"We have decided to furnish milk in the public school for some marked cases of under-nourishment, some of them the result of influenza. During the month, we transported to the hospital 18 cases of influenza, aided in

Rats and Bubonic Plague

Bubonic plague is more common in the United States than typhus. The plague is primarily a disease of rats, caught by them from fleas, carrying the infection. Many Mediterranean ports are now reported as being infected by rats suffering from plague. These infected rodents are carried from one country to another on ships, where they get ashore and start new outbreaks. If an infected flea gets eight family cases, and provided care for five old people suffering from tuberculosis. We also assisted in improving the welfare of seven old people, took care of a young boy who was without work or funds and one runaway girl, placed three children under the care of the juvenile court and placed two in a boarding house."

Reports from other localities indicate a warm Red Cross interest in community centers, clinics and other more concrete forms of social betterment. Activities of this kind differ, just as the needs which prompt them differ, each locality presenting curious types of problems.

There is, however, one need which irrespective of locality is found to be prevalent everywhere—the need for health education.

Ignorance is the underlying cause of the continued disaster of preventable disease and death that are undermining the vitality of the American people. Health education is the means by which this ignorance can be removed. In recognizing this, the Red Cross is establishing health centers where information and education will be offered and where the health workers of the community may be brought to work together. While only a few of the health centers have been put in operation by Red Cross chapters, there being at the present time only about 75 centers in the country, the activity is growing steadily. Within a few years it is expected the Red Cross health center will form as definite a part of the community's institutions as the public school or library. Much depends on the interest of the people themselves.

Then there is the Red Cross Nursing service. Nursing service obviously tends to improve health conditions and promote health interests. The total number of nurses enrolled in Red Cross Nursing service is 37,300; of these 105 are colored women. While during the war thousands of applications were received from nurses, the enrollment has now resumed its pre-war status, the present monthly average being only about 125. This number falls far short of the demand, and in order to increase the supply, the Red Cross is daily bending its efforts in behalf of the recruiting of nurses. Of the 37,300 nurses, 531 are public health nurses serving under Red Cross chapters; and 124 serving in organizations affiliated with the Red Cross and under the supervision.

The Junior Red Cross interprets the Red Cross foreign relief program and its work in this country to school people and youngsters, and is now reaching over half of the school children in America. Fourteen of the 23,000,000 are enrolled in its membership. One hundred and eighty-six thousand teachers are serving as leaders of Junior Red Cross clubs in the 21,960 Junior Red Cross school auxiliaries. While their outstanding service is in answer to the humanitarian appeal of the suffering childhood of devastated foreign countries, their interest in service at home is equally keen. By means of the educational program supplied to thousands of schools by the Junior Red Cross, various educational courses, such as first aid are adapted to the children.

nor cause any waves?" It is told in the Ecclesiastical history that the Bishop Adam gave holy oil to travelers, saying: "But do you remember to cast this oil I give you into the sea, and the wind shall cease immediately." Pliny the elder proclaimed that "everything is soothed by oil." Our own Ben Franklin wrote much on the phenomenon of oil on the troubled waters. It has grown to be an accepted belief in every walk of life that where there is oil to be poured forth there is peace.

Oil on Troubled Waters.

Poets and philosophers of all ages have sung of oil and its soothing qualities. "Why," asked Plutarch, "does pouring oil on the sea make it clear and calm? Is it for that the winds slipping over smooth oil have no force,

How Many Women Are Like This?

Can anything be more wearing for women than the ceaseless round of household duties? Oh! the monotony of it all—work and drudge; no time to be sick; tired, ailing, yet cannot stop. There comes a time when something "snaps" and they find themselves "simply worn out," and to make matters worse, have contracted serious feminine disorder which almost always follows the constant overtaxing of a woman's strength.

Then they should remember that there is no remedy like Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—the experience of these two women establishes that fact:

Cedar Rapids, Ia.—"After the birth of my last child I had such painful spells that would unfit me entirely for my household work. I suffered for months and the doctor said that my trouble was organic ulcers and I would have to have an operation. That was an awful thing to me with a young baby and four other children, so one day I thought of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and how it had helped me years before and I decided to try it again. I took five bottles of Vegetable Compound and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and since then I have been a well woman, able to take care of my house and family without any trouble or a day's pain. I am ready and thankful to wear your medicine every time. I am forty-four years old and have not had a day's illness of any kind for three years."—Mrs. H. Koenig, 617 Ellis Blvd., Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Sandusky, Ohio.—"After the birth of my baby I had organic trouble. My doctor said it was caused by too heavy lifting and I would have to have an operation. I would not consent to an operation and let it go for over a year, having my sister do my work for me as I was not able to walk. One day my aunt came to see me and told me about your medicine—said it cured her of the same thing. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and they have cured me. Now I do my own household, washing and ironing and sewing for my family and also do sewing for other people. I still take a bottle of Vegetable Compound every spring for a tonic. I recommend your medicine to others who have troubles similar to mine and you can use my letter if you wish."—Mrs. PAUL FARNHURST, 1325 Stone St., Sandusky, Ohio.

EATONIC Users —Do This—Get the Greatest Benefits

Chicago, Ill.—Thousands of reports from people all over the U. S. who have tested Eatonic, show the greatest benefits are obtained by using it for a few weeks, taking one or two tablets after each meal.

Eatonic users know that it stops Belching, Bloating, Heartburn, and Stomach Miseries quickly, but the really lasting benefits are obtained by using Eatonic long enough to take the harmful excess acids and gases entirely out of the system. This requires a little time, for Eatonic takes up the excess acidity and poisons and carries them out of the body and of course, when it is all removed, the sufferer gets well, feels fine—full of life and pep.

If you have been taking an Eatonic now and then, be sure and take it regularly for a time and obtain all of these wonderful benefits. Please speak to your druggist about this, so that he can tell others that need this help. Adv.

STREET LIGHT SPECIFICATIONS

walk shall be removed to the next joint beyond the excavation required by the installation of said posts and conduits.

General Provisions.

After the work is completed and before acceptance of same, the contractor shall notify said lighting committee who will connect the system with the wires of the Edison Company and test all wiring and electrical apparatus used, and if all work is found to be done in accordance with plans and specifications, work shall be accepted and paid for by said Committee.

All work shall in every respect be executed in a thorough workmanlike manner. No work which may be defective in its construction or deficient in any of the requirements of these specifications will be considered as executed. In consequence of the failure of an inspector of the City connected with the work to point out said defects or deficiency during the construction and the contractor shall be required to correct any imperfect work before the final acceptance of the work.

The contractor assumes all risk of variance of any computations or statements of amounts of quantities necessary to complete the work required by the contract and agrees to furnish all necessary labor and material and fully complete said work in accordance with plans and specifications and to the satisfaction of Street Superintendent and Light Committee.

Bidders must examine and judge for themselves as to the location of proposed work, the nature of the excavating to be made and the work to be done. The contractor shall give twenty-four (24) hours notice in writing when he shall require the services of lighting committee for laying out any portion of the work.

The contractor shall be required to observe all ordinances of the City of Sierra Madre in relation to the obstruction of streets, keeping open passage ways and protecting the same by erecting a fence or proper barrier along the line of the work and across the ends of same in order to guard the public from danger during the progress of the work. A red light must be maintained at night at each end of barrier from sunset to sunrise.

The contractor shall remove all surplus material and rubbish from work after its completion and before he makes application for the acceptance of the work.

The contractor shall notify the Lighting Committee when he desires a final inspection of the work when the latter will, as soon as possible, make the necessary examination and if the work is found to be in compliance with the above specifications, the Light Committee will furnish the contractor with a certificate to that effect.

Lights and Globes

Each post is to be equipped with one (1) 100 Candle Power type C, Nitrogen 6.6 Amp. street series lamp. One (1) 8 in. by 18 inch ball globe. This globe shall be what is known as Moonstone or its equivalent and shall not absorb more than fifty-five (55) per cent of the light, nor less than fifty (50) per cent of light given off by lamp. If other than the Moonstone globe is proposed to be used it shall be left to the decision of the Street Lighting Committee as to whether said globes are equivalent to the Moonstone globe and satisfactory for said work. The globe shall be smooth inside and out and free from all imperfections; each globe is to be equipped with a G. E. receptacle socket number 25708, or its equivalent.

Excavation and Back Filling

The excavation required for laying of conduit and installing of foundations for lamp posts shall be done in such a manner as to cause the least injury possible to streets and sidewalks. The dirt shall be piled near curb in such a manner as not to interfere with traffic.

Whenever the word Contractor is used in these specifications it refers to the party or parties of the second part in the agreement for the construction of the work herein specified. Whenever the word Lighting Committee is used in these specifications it refers respectively to Mr. J. F. Whiting, Mr. E. H. Allen and Mr. F. H. Hartman.

Mrs. M. O. Downs' on Victoria Lane.

The people of Bethany feel that they were very fortunate in having such a man as the Rev. Elwood P. Lyon, Ph. D., D. D., speak to them last Sunday in the absence of Dr. W. H. Rawlings, and were especially delighted with the announcement that he will fill the pulpit again next Sunday morning and evening. Those who have not heard Dr. Lyon, whose ministry is in the praise of all denominations throughout the country, will no doubt be glad of this opportunity.

The subject of the sermon at the morning service will be "The Greatest Street Preacher," and in the evening, "Entangling Alliances; Past, Present, Future, of the Jewish People." All are cordially invited to attend, especially our Jewish people, at the evening service.

Matter of Mathematics.

A woman whose hobby was the psychology and the esoteric influence of colors, was deeply gratified one morning when her husband admitted that there might be something in her theory after all. "Dawson?" questioned Mrs. Madison, amazed, for Dawson was the manager of her husband's stables. "Yes; he says the bays eat more than the grays," "Really! How does he account for it?" "Why, there are ten more bays than grays."
